OBSERVATIONS

SEVERAL of the Livings returned herewith as under the annual value of £. 150, are at present episcopally united, and it is presumed that a better disposition may hereafter be made of them.

The values are stated on the authority of the Incumbents, or their Agents.

Several Episcopal Unions now subsisting in an inconvenient form are not returned, because when hereafter separated, or in a better manner re-united, they will probably require no augmentation.

The Bishop of Kildare will not pledge himself for the accuracy of any part of his return taken either from the Visitation Books, or from the Registry of his Diocese.

In the office for the receipt of the first fruits, tenths and twentieth parts, benefices appear, in the taxation of which the names are now unknown.—Should a Parliamentary Commission for arranging the neglected Records of Ireland be speedily appointed, much valuable information respecting the Church will undoubtedly be obtained; and as it cannot be irrelevant to such an inquiry as the present, it is humbly suggested that if not done soon, the opportunity, after the lapse of a few years, may not easily be regained.

3rd February 1810.

CHARLES KILDARE.

(Ireland.)
